Ania Mazurkiewicz is a Child Mental Health Consultants with the National Workforce Centre for Child Mental Health (NWCCMH), delivered by Emerging Minds (previously known as AICAFMA).

This project has been funded by the federal government to provide free access to prevention and early intervention workforce development to support outcomes for child mental health across Australia, with the view that it does not matter where we work, we need to “keep children in mind”.

Our key target workforces are health, social and community services – those working with children and families but also those working with adults who may be parents. The project is run in partnership with Australian Institute of Family Studies (AIFS), Australian National University (ANU), Parenting Research Centre (PRC) and the Royal Australian College of General Practitioners (RACGP). This initiative is progressive and aligns with evidence which shows long term gains for individuals and the community as a result of equal investments in promotion, prevention, and early intervention.

Kerri-Ann Barry Community Project Officer – Children and Families with Camden Council. Early in 2018 she presented the process for the development of the Camden Council Child and Family strategy which has now been developed accepted and launched.
